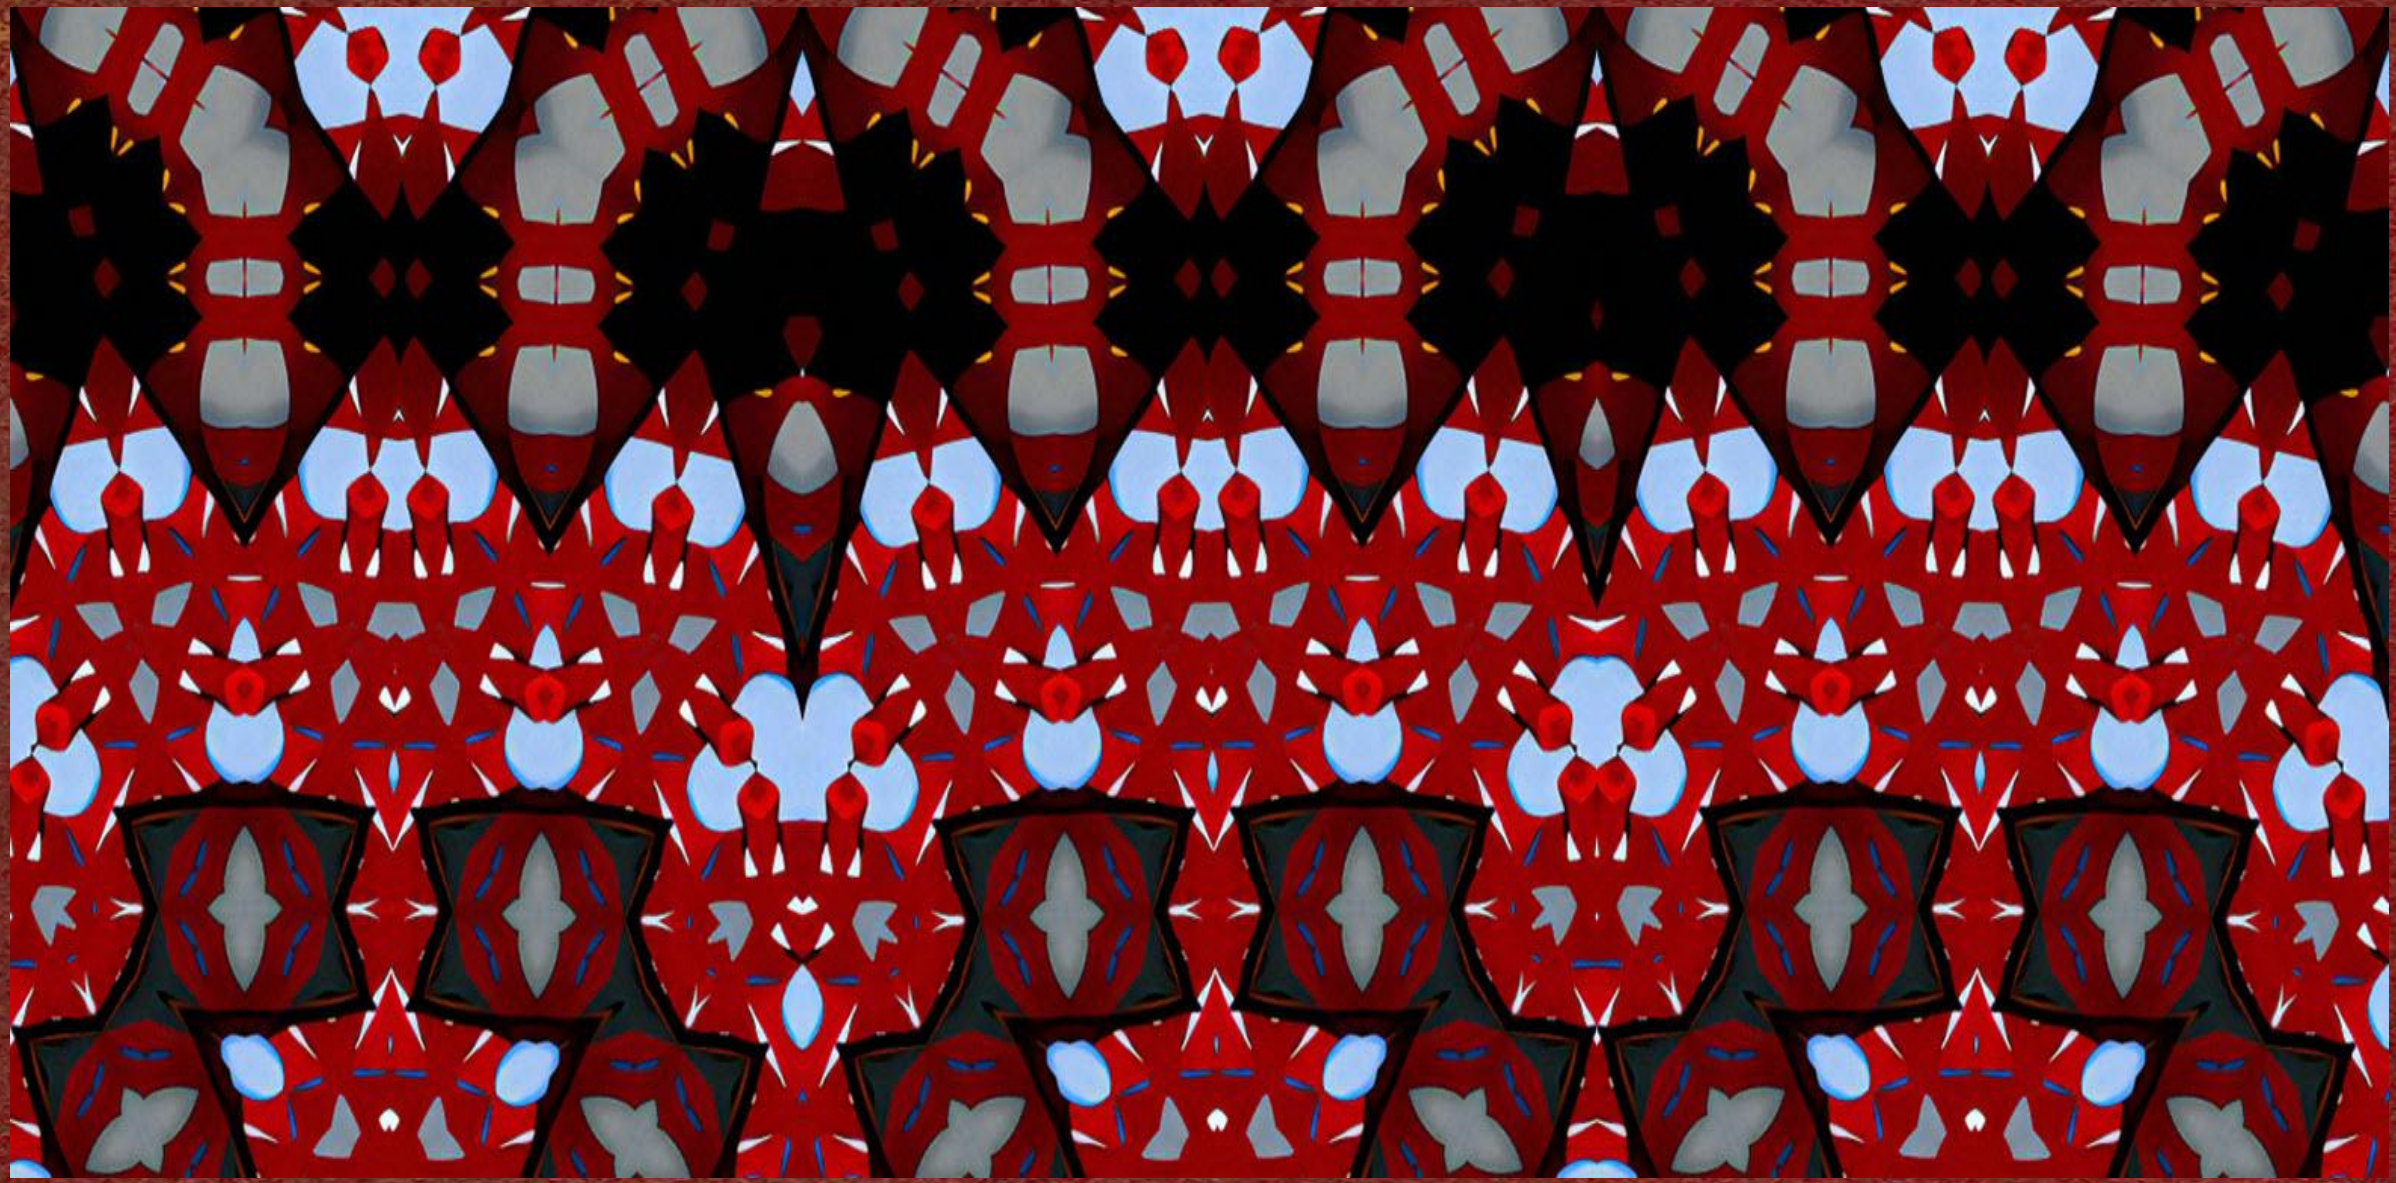
PART ONE

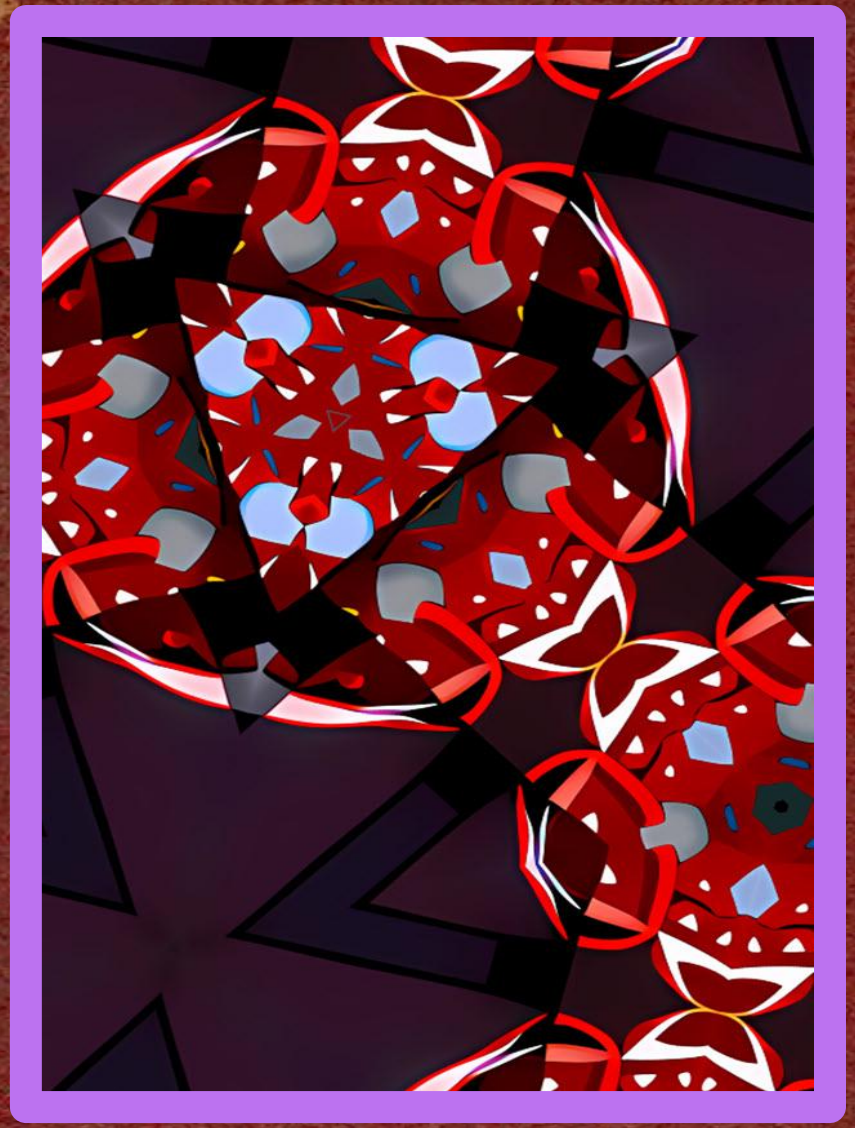
What could have, what should have happened doesn't matter as we buried it out in the cemetery just yest yesterday with much fanfare and an outrageous gala that revealed the best that Commissar Kalama’s Square, could have mustered even back in its heyday.

Granted you have to take my word on this as (for whatever reason) you weren't there.

Trust me, you did miss the anti-woke social of the year!

Everyone was there wearing their finest disguise to make it past the city's new mandatory port of entry.



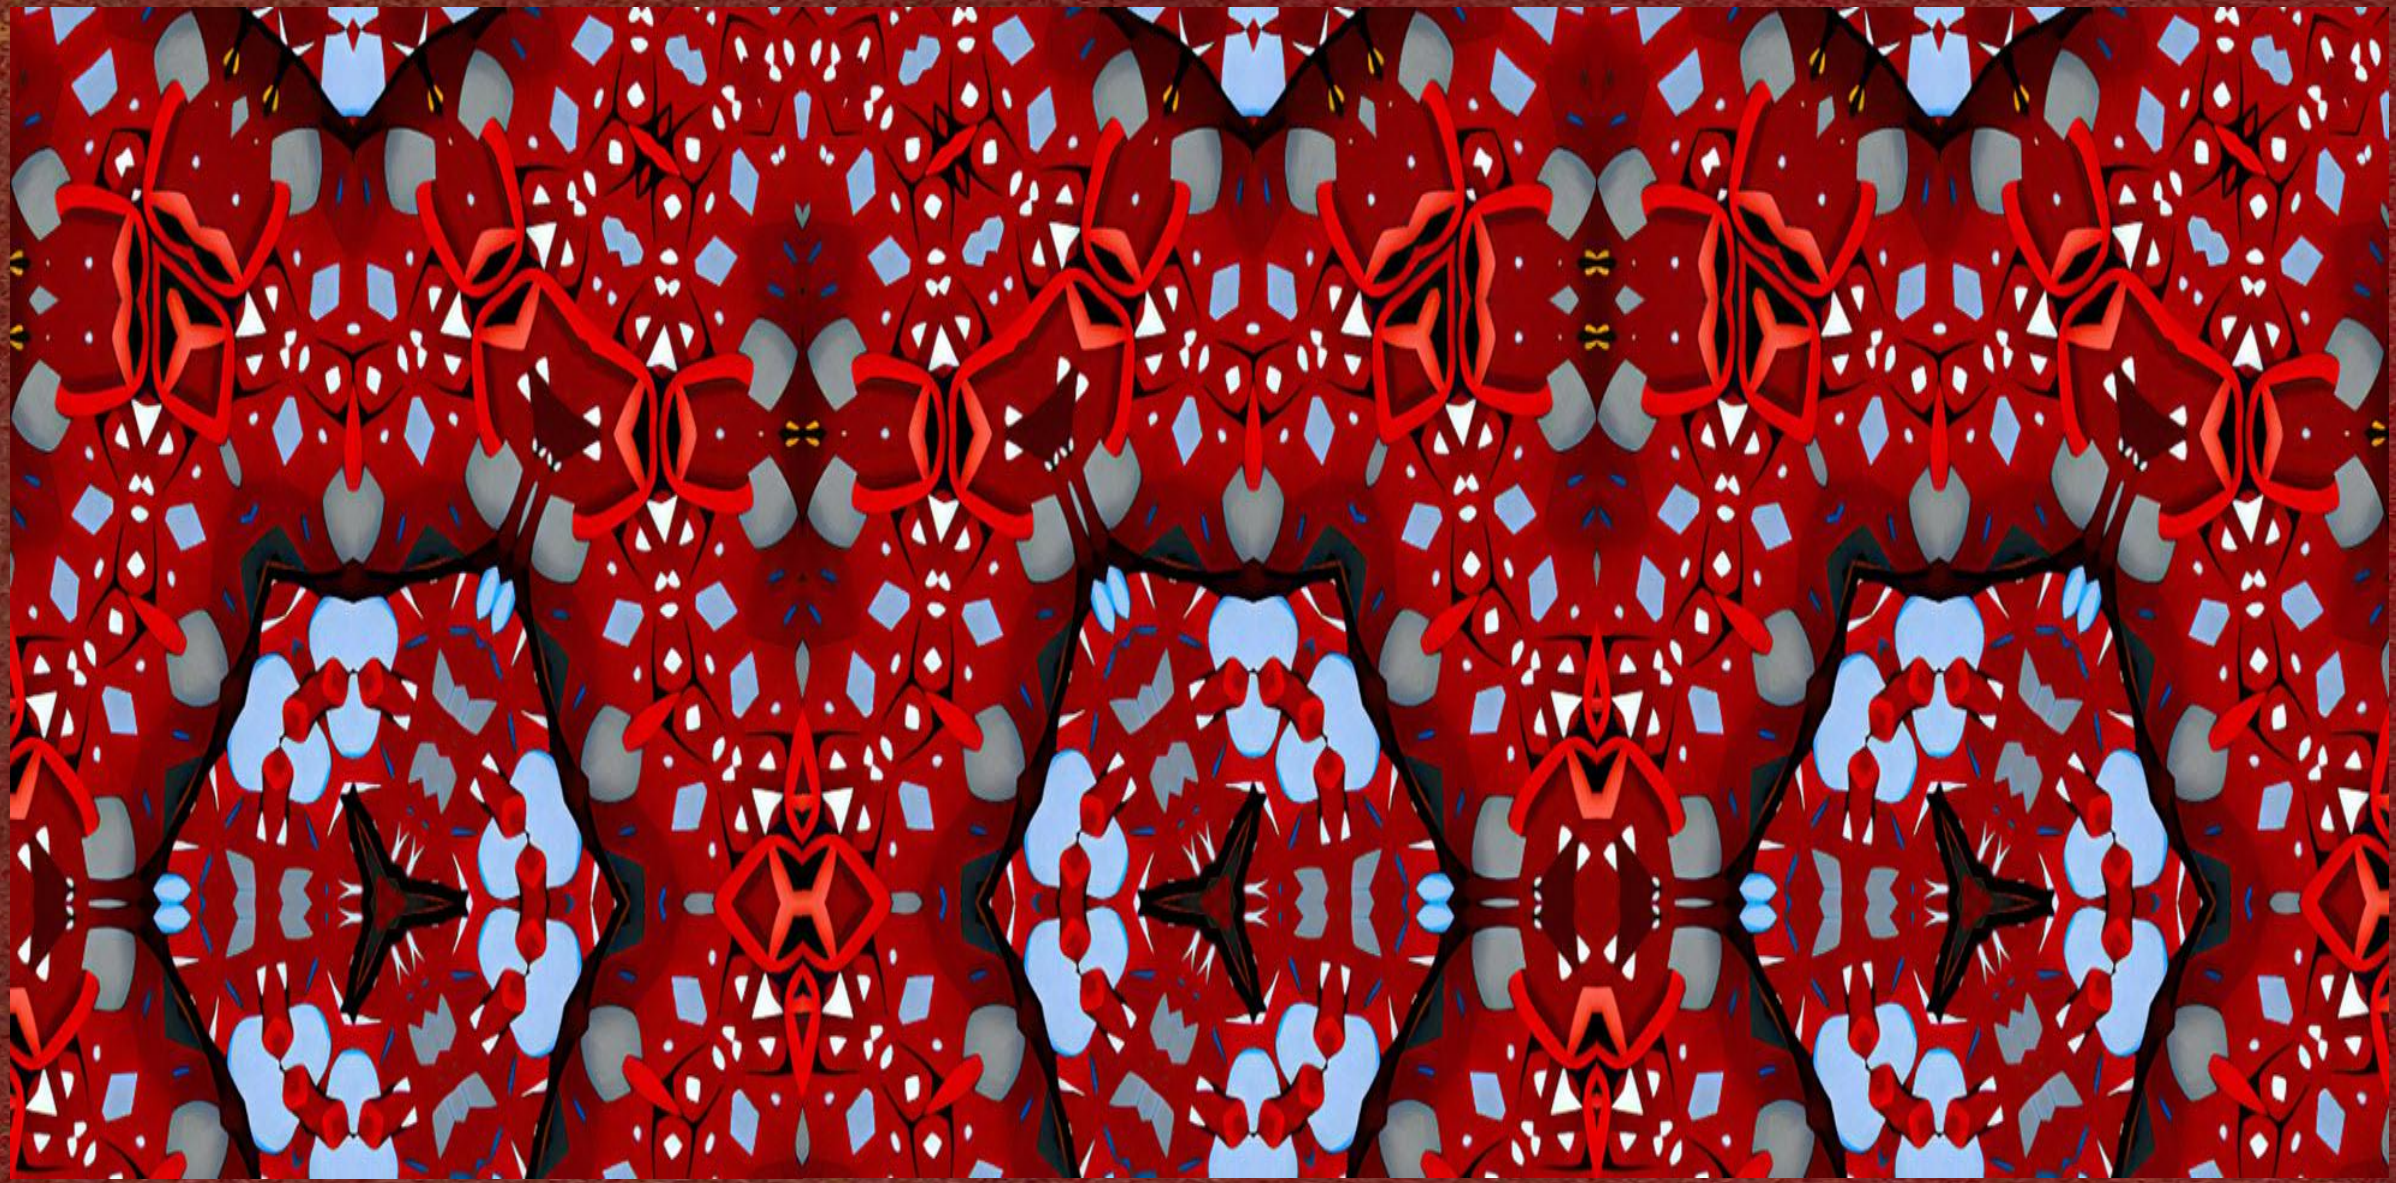


DISGUISES???

Ya...See those faceless clerks that monitor the city's business as part of Ahriman's Great Social Reset are as clueless as they were back in the golden age except more so as all their computers are solar powered and you can just imagine how well that works out on cloudy or rainy days.

So, they have to revert back to the ancient method of eyeballing the crowd for anyone looking to be a hooligan.

This is why everyone wore the best rendition of what a socially proper Ahriman WEF Goonie might have elected to parade around in.



ANYWAY, IT WORKED!

There is always that rare exception that turds up the bunch bowl as the DJ that I hired to MC the main event got himself and his crew busted as they tried to smuggle in over a ton of sound equipment through the check point.

Hopefully, they will be OK as we sent Chester (our own local neighborhood super-secret “00” Spyster) over to smooth things out with one of the very last cases of aged Crown Royal to be found anywhere in the lower 48 and maybe, even on the other side of the former Canadian Border.

This might be the Great Social Reset but civil service corruption and cut-rate, carney huskerism is still very much alive and I belief it is prospering quite well here in the eternal “City of Life.”

In the end, I am happy to announce that everything went off without a hitch with Chester arriving with the DJ, his equipment and (I swear) nearly half the port of entry cops in tow.

It was one hell of a swing-ding time and even old lady nature held off the rain until the wake was just a fond memory as we all headed home before the new curfew.

Let me tell you that the more the world changes or in this case goes off-the-rail, batshit crazy; something like our ability to host a good party ain’t never gonna change down here on the Big Easy no matter what kind of fools or inter-planetary gangsters are running the world.

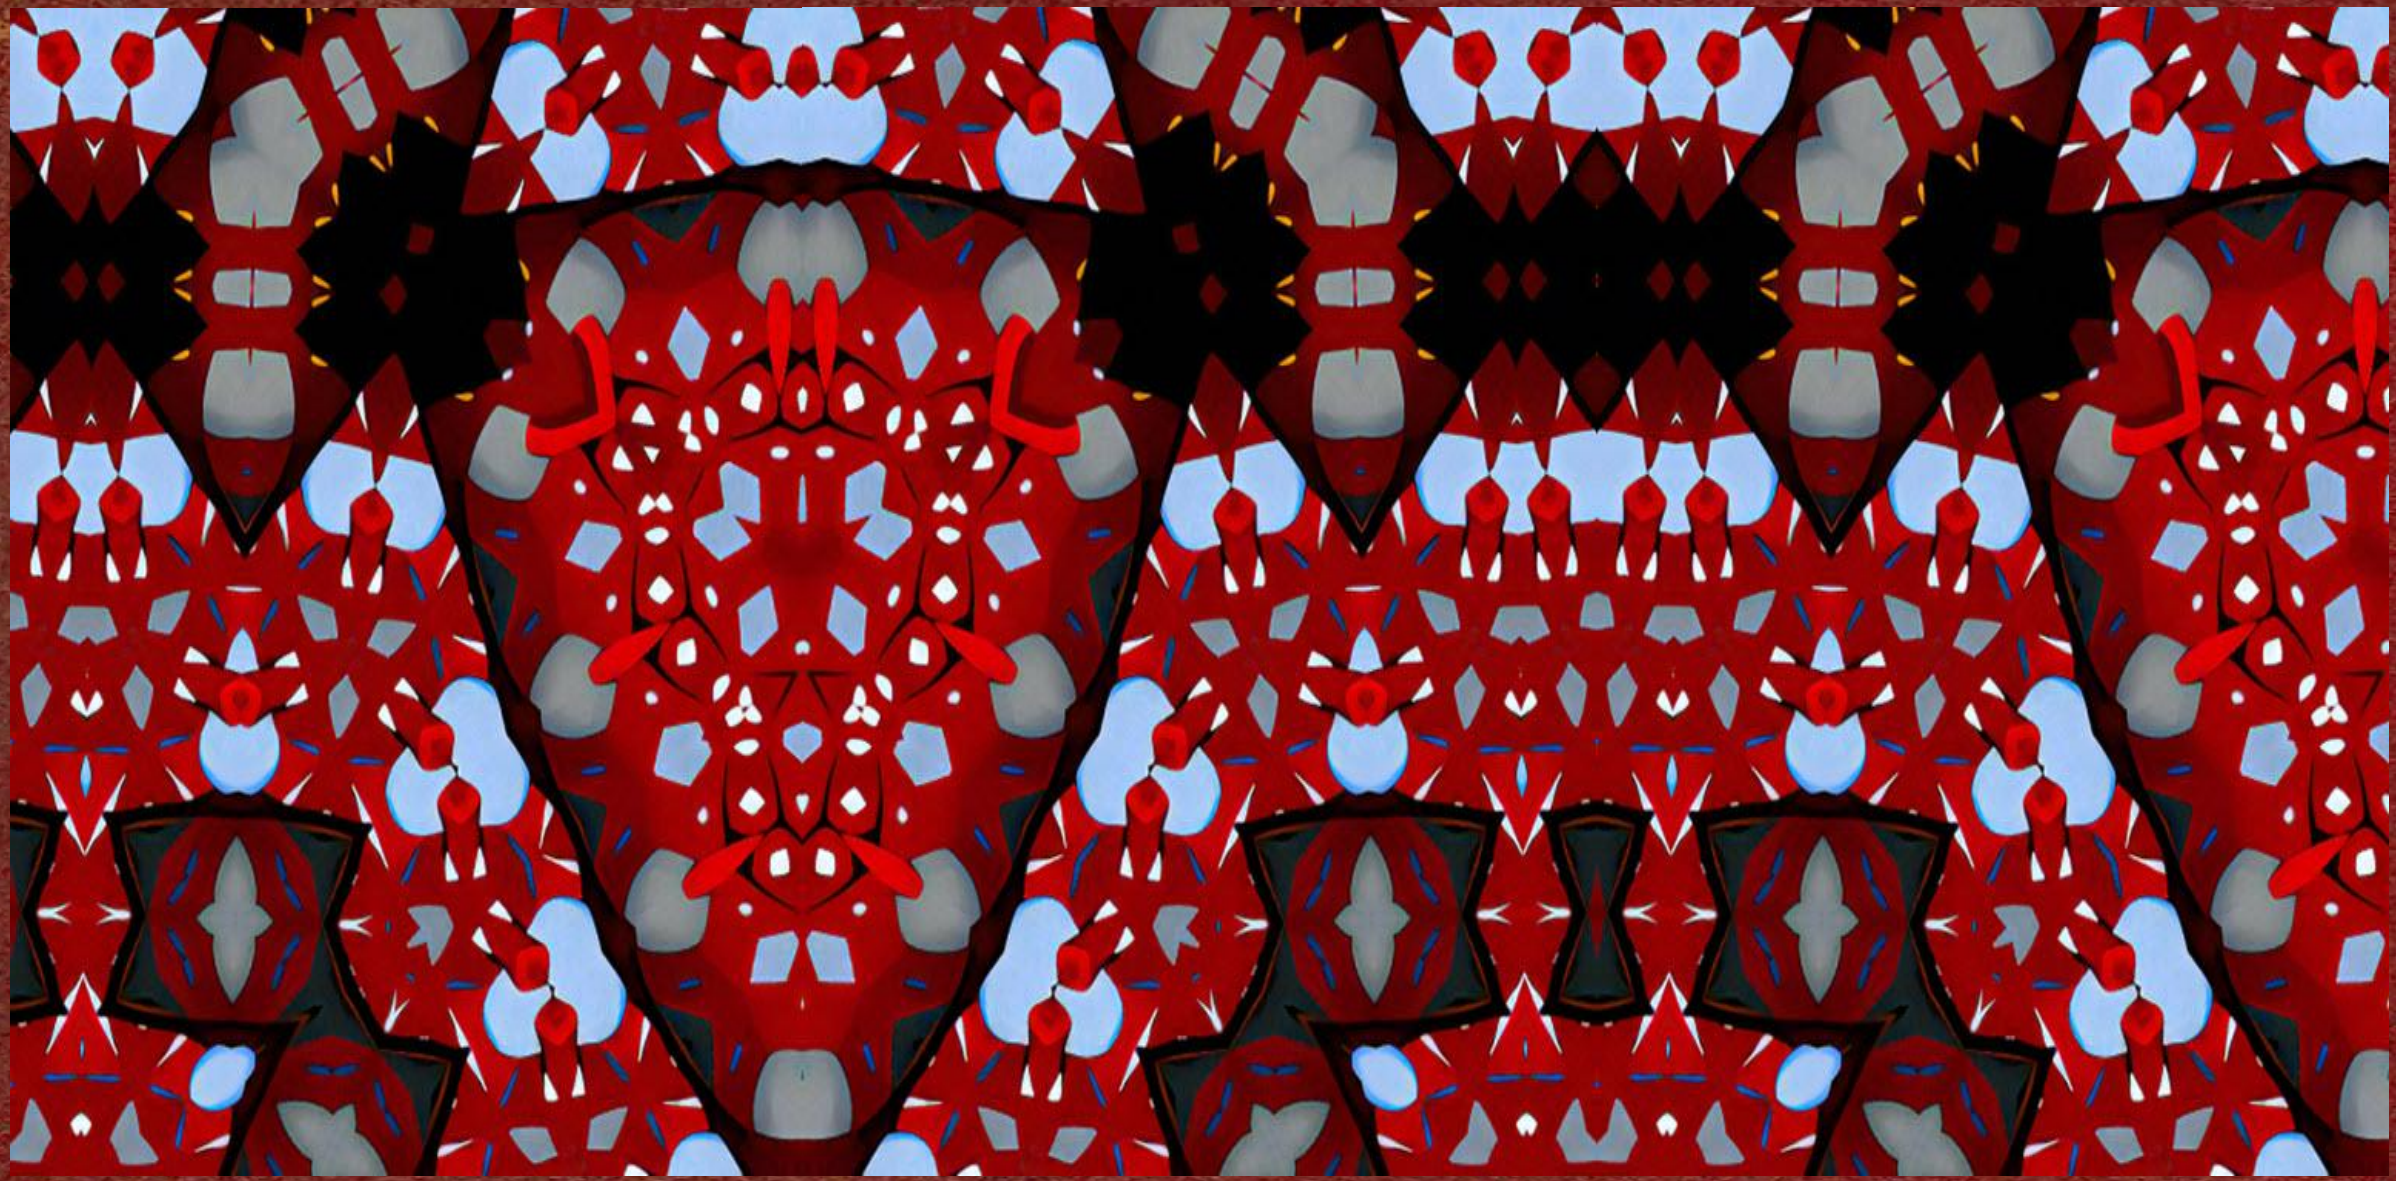
I asked Chester about all this hoping that he might be willing to share a few tips on how he got that dang DJ and his ton of equipment through the port of entry and paused the wagon and tried to educate this poor Yankee Boy:

“Ward 5 was here long time before this new crew of woke pansies rode into town with pronouns edicts and even the Antifa Militia in tow…and ya know what Bubba? We will still be here long after they are just a singular footnote at the bottom of some future history text that no one will be inclined to read…”



That’s it! Luckily, I was sober enough to get his words written down on the inside back cover of the paperback I always carry full of famous quotes by real smart people like the former CEO of China Inc. (Chairman of the Board Mao), Groucho Marx and even a chapter dedicated to the career of Don Rickles amongst others.

Very handy book that has often got me through delicate situations, prevented more than a few bar fights and, makes me sound like an aged Tucker Carlson amongst most dive bar clientele.

Chester is the go-to guy down here in the Holy Cross District if you are needing to get anything done without getting your own hands dirty or getting your back thrown out while making a midnight run out to Lake Pontchartrain to feed some hungry gators.
